Book Overview. The series is an important collection that contains. Pakistan Studies. [Muhammad Ikram Rabbani; Nigel Smith; Abdul Qadir Khan]. This could be due to a decreased blood perfusion in patients' brains \[@pone.0169169.ref023],\[@pone.0169169.ref024]. Furthermore, brain hypometabolism has been found in stroke patients \[@pone.0169169.ref025],\[@pone.0169169.ref026]. Decreases in the semiological network model (both β and θ band) were found in stroke patients with executive function problems. The semiological network model was constructed by Blautzik et al. \[@pone.0169169.ref015] and has been widely used to study the EEG changes in patients with neuropsychiatric disorders \[@pone.0169169.ref027],\[@pone.0169169.ref028]. Such a decrease in the β band was found in other studies of hypofrontality in patients with Huntington's disease and Alzheimer's disease \[@pone.0169169.ref029],\[@pone.0169169.ref030]. As the visual attention is a top-down attention, patients might not control the vision of the environment efficiently as a result of the motor function damage. On the other hand, an increase in the θ band was also reported in studies of Alzheimer's disease \[@pone.0169169.ref029]. Although a decrease in the θ band was reported in patients with schizophrenia \[@pone.0169169.ref032], it remains unclear whether the decrease was caused by the hypofrontality in patients with schizophrenia.
